Nermin Ahmad, President, NFBPWC, NYC
Chair, Women on the Move, NFBPWC-USA;
BPW International, UN Rep Migration

Women on the move, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, have a disproportionately difficult time re-establishing themselves as entrepreneurs in their destinations as their experience and credentials are often not recognized, and support networks for financing are often inaccessible to them.

Seoyeon Lee, Director, Global Region 2
International Women's Peace Group
Republic of Korea

Solidarity and Education Are Essential to Building World Peace and Justice

Women's peace education serves as a vital catalyst by fostering the noble capacity for critical thinking, enabling the systematic resolution of problems and conflicts in a rapidly changing era, and ensuring the smooth functioning of all activities.

The International Women's Peace Group (IWPG) integrates peace education into its mission to advance women's rights, promote gender equality, nurture institutions, establish an integrated framework, and present strategies. Through these efforts, IWPG plays a transformative role and faces challenges to support the SDGs (Sustainable Development Goals) for global peace and security.

Datin Dr. (h.c) Hartini Osman, Malaysia G100 Global President 2026

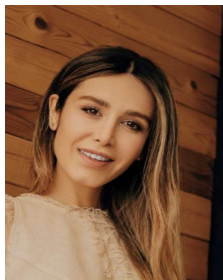

world bank for women: redesigning finance for dignity, equity & peace - as G100 Global President, I present the vision of a World Bank for Women—an ethical, women-designed global financial system that moves beyond charity toward dignity, access, and systemic inclusion. The session explores how women-led governance, impact-first finance, and global partnerships can redesign capital flows to stabilise communities, eradicate poverty, and build pathways to peace..
